Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C or D to indicate the correct answer to each of the questions.

Women won their independence years ago. After a long struggle, they now enjoy the same educational opportunities as men in most parts of the world. They have proved repeatedly that they are equal and often superior to men in almost every field.

The battle for recognition has been won, but it is by no means over. Men still carry on the sex war because their attitude remains basically hostile. Even in the most progressive societies, women continue to be regarded as second-rate citizens. Although many men show no respect for women, their claim to superiority are not borne out by statistics. Let's consider the matter of driving, for instance. We all know that women cause fewer accidents than men. Women have succeeded in any job you care to name. As politicians, soldiers, doctors, factory-hands, university professors, farmers, company directors, lawyers, bus-conductors, scientists and presidents of countries, they have often put men to shame. And we must remember that they frequently succeed brilliantly in all these fields in addition to bearing and rearing children.

Yet men continue to say that there are jobs that women cannot do. Top-level political negotiation between countries, business and banks and etc. are mostly controlled by men. Many argue that men are avoiding real competition as they know women are superior, and men are afraid of being beaten at their own game. One of the most important tasks in the world is to achieve peace between the nations. You can be sure that if women were allowed to sit round the conference table, they would succeed brilliantly, as they always do.
